2 of 2 review helpful good and informative By Customer i bought this for my fiance we are long distance and planning the wedding from a few countries away so i thought that since he is a captive audience downrange i could send him any reading material i thought appropriate i read this before i sent it to him and i pretty much liked everything i hope that he reads it with an open mind right now he is t Today s groom expects and is expected to take on a large and often times equal role in the planning of the big event The days of the husband ndash to ndash be just showing up with a nice suit on and having no idea of what went into the planning are long gone This is not to say that the groom s interests need to be the same as the bride s This book will help the groom to choose what interests them and works well with their talents If it is not picking out the table cl About the Author Doug Gordon is the creator of the popular blog PlanetGordon com He is also a television producer and writer whose work includes Modern Marvels for The History Channel and Who Wants to Be a Millionaire for ABC He lives in
